THE MULTIPLICITY OF OFFICES.

Uriah Heep was a very "umble individual," but he had, nevertheless, sufficient ambition to aspire to the hand of his master's daughter and the head of his master's business. Our public men seem to have a good deal of Heepism in their political composition. They declare the colony to be an umble oclony," yet they aspire to make it the "gem of the Pacific." They make the most lamentable whines about our peverty, but they are ready to-morrow to plunge the country into an expense that would require almost the wealth of the Rothschilds to sustain. When we say that their speeches are bunkum and their acts masses of inconsistency, we express pretty nearly the feeling of the general public upon their present legislation. So far as the assertion goes that the colony is unable to assume a heavy civil list with its present revenue, it has something to recommend it; but we admire consistency, and when we find the same mem bers who repudiated the civil list on the grounds of financial incapacity coming forward and sanctioning unnecessary expenses, we are led to suppose that honorable members ar not always sincere in what they say.

One of the principal duties of the mem bers of the House of Assembly is to guard well the public purse. If they exhibit a disposition of recklessness in constructing new avenues for public expenditure, how can they with any show of reason insist on are laid before them. The notions of Executives generally are not those of economy extravagance is one of their cardinal sine and it requires all the care and alertness of the people's representatives to see that the public is not called upon to pay for individuals or institutions not necessitated by the exigencies of the country. The recent debate on the Coroner's bill cannot do other wise than impress on the Executive the idea that the House of Assembly is a House of extravagance. We do not say that it is necessary or advisable to dispense with the office of coroner: but we do maintain that. in a population no larger than a good English village, for the public to be saddled with the expenses that the same bill will entail, while it is at the present time under the necessity of paying the salaries of a Stipendiary Magistrate and a Commissioner of Police, is monstrous in the extreme If there had been anything said in the debate that would have led us to believe that the House intended making a reduction in the expenses of the police department, we might have been induced to submit with some degree of patience to the Ceroner's bill : but there was net a single word about it, nor in the new Incorporation Act of Mr. DeCosmos is there the slightest allusion to any such economic change. Our House of Assembly is a nice bedy certainly to talk of retrenchment, when it sees nothing ridiculous, nothing extravagant in six thousand people supporting a paid magistrate, a paid commissioner police, a paid coroner, a paidecoroner's officer a paid town clerk, and a paid police clerk. Such an array of officials to perform func-tions that might, with as great a degree of perfection, be carried out with half the numr is simply an imposition on the public. In the course of a little time we shall have the stipendiary magistrate and his commissioner, the coroner and his officer, and the mayor and his clerk, like so many Quixotes with their Sancho Panzas, going, out of sheer

There was, no doubt, great need of a bill to define the coroner's duties and to give him all necessary power to further the ends of justice; but is there a sane person in Victoria who does not feel the necessity of For Vice President — Mr. Gilbert M. decreasing instead of increasing the expenses of every public department in the colony. We do not want the ridiculous elashing of coroners and magnitates as in the Mother country, nor the expense and loss of time of decreasing instead of increasing the expenses country, nor the expense and loss of time of two trials, when one is ample. Either the coroner should have been magistrate or the magistrate coroner. For our own part we believe a clever man occupying the post of mayor could fulfill all the duties that would pertain to the three offices for years to come. At all events, if Dr. Dickson had shown more prudence he would have kept himself aloof from the debates on the Coroner's bill, or if he did feel it necessary to explain matters, he should have been content with laying the case fairly bafore the House, and leaving it in the hands of his brother members. He has not done so; but has entered with an unusual amount of warmness into the discussion, and as a necessary consequence, has created a bad impression on the outside public. There is really too much of this personal matter in the Assembly. The present medical bill may be really a necessary measure, and we believe in the main it is; but there are clauses much too illiberal for a new colony, and which raise the unpleasant suggestion that we have too many medical men in the House. We are really afraid that the American log-rolling principle will become some day too much a haracteristic of Vancouver Island legislation, and that every member will be ready to grind his neighor's axe, if there is only a little good-natured reciprocity in turning the

The chairman on rising to make a few marks was greeted with applause. He said the lack of an institution of the kind pro-posed was one of the first wants which struck him on his arrival in the colony. He alluded to the great advantages of, such institutions, and urged the audience and the citizens gen-erally to put their shoulders to the wheel and aid the good work to the utmost of their power. He would call on Mr. Sprout to move the first resolution.

Mr. Sproat said the following resolution had been placed in his bands, and touched the only difficulty which institutions of this kind usually encountered. He had been connected with several movements of this kind here, and his experience showed that the best way was to pass some general resolutions and appoint a committee to anary out the details. He begged to propose the following resolution:

That a society be established in Victoria to be called "the Victoria Literary Institute," which shall have for its object the formation of a reading-rosen, library and museum; the delivery of lectures and the diffusion of literary and scientific knowledge among the people of Victoria.

Mr. R. Wallace seconded the resolution.

Mr. Corin proposed the next resolution, providing for the appointment of officers for the society.

Mr. Wallace asked if any provision was made for President or Vice-President?
Mr. Alston said the committee would appoint its own President. The patron was the acad of the society.

Mr. Wallace said the President and Vice-President should certainly be elected by the Society at large. He would therefore move an amendment to that effect.

Mr. Cortin's resolution was amended by consent and parsed as follows:
That the officers of the Institute shall consist of a Patron, President, Vice President, Trustees, Committee of Management, Secreary and Treasurer.

Mr. Fawcett moved the next resolution in

The price of iron has fallen, and the masters, who generally own the collieries, instead of reducing the wages of the iron workers reduced those of the colliers, whose produce had not fallen in price. The colliers thinking this unfair struck, and the masters have been endeavoring to obtain coal from Wales to keep their works going. The colliers thereupen asked their fellow-workmen in Wales to prohibit any master from sending coal to Staffordshire; but this demand was refused, and the men are gradually going back to work. They certainly appear to have been very hardly treated. Even supposing both works aught to be treated as one, it was gross favoritism to throw the whole burden on half the men simply because they were the easier half to fight. It is as if a hosier and glover, finding the price of socks fallen should insist an decision all in colorances of the income are and officers and decision all in colorances. the society to be members ex efficio.

QUESTION OF TRIVILOGE.

Dr. Dickson said some reflections had been east on him by certain parties in regard to his action on this bill, and although some of these parties were beneath his notice, still there were others whom he wished to stand well with, and he would avail himself of this opportunity of explaining his position in the matter. He begged for say that the bill as laid before the Hours was exactly as placed in his hands by the Attorney-General who had prepared it by order of the Governor. So far as the bill being constructed to suit the present Coroner, there was not a single clause in it nor a single power granted to the Coroner which was not in the English statutes. The only mistake he had made was taking charge of the bill at all; it would perhaps have been botter for some other hon, member to have done se.

The House went into Committee of the whole on the MEDICAL BILL

The committee here reported progress on the bill, and took up the LAND REGISTRY BILL.

Mr. Franklin laid before the House the amendments he had prepared on the bill; they were chiefly taken from the British Columbian act, which had been most carefully prepared, and were similar to the American system.

Mr. Young said he had on the last occasion opposed the bill, having one of his own to introduce as a substitute; he had been presented from doing so, however, by being told that the preamble of the original bill had been passed. He donied, that, such a preamble had passed in proper order, as he had been waiting anticularly to introduce his own bill as an amendment.

Dr. Helmeken said the bon, geniferan was quite out of order in his mode of introducing his bill. He should have brought it in clause by clause as amendments when the first section of the original bill ease up. It was now too late to introduce it at all.

Mr. Franklin's amendments were passed to the following effect:—To suite instruments to be registered; providing for acknowledgments or Obsaul; providing that the party making acknowledgments with the present time they are commissioned on that behalf and beautiful the present of the original bill said.
